A word from the Praeses

Hey dearest fellow students!

Welcome to our T-magazine, a magazine in which we, as Industria, keep you updated on everything happening on and around Campus Groep T! The start of the year is the ideal moment to gain new experiences and get to know new people. So take your chance and take a step out into the world!

A great example of a top activity to do together with your friends (or where you can make new friends) is the Student Welcome! So make sure to check out the Oude Markt on September 24th for an incredible party to kick off the academic year in style.

Furthermore, on behalf of all of Industria, I wish you all the best of luck and fun in the new academic year! If there's something on your mind that you're not sure how to handle, stop by our room sometime and maybe we can help you out!

Tim out!

Frituursnack of the week

De frikandel / curryworst - the snack with an identity crisis.

The most iconic frituursnack in Belgium might just be the frikandel. Or is it the curryworst? A long hamburger? The name of this mysterious deep-fried creation depends largely on where you are. In Antwerp, you'll probably ask for a curryworst, while in many other parts of Belgium, frikandel is the word that rolls off the tongue. If you happen to find yourself in Limburg, things get even more confusing: there, a long hamburger might be exactly what you're looking for. Whatever you choose to call it, one thing remains the same: it's long, smooth, brown, and suspiciously uniform from end to end. It's usually served with a generous amount of sauce, some chopped onions, and no explanation of what exactly went into making it.

But perhaps that's part of the charm? The frikandel doesn't ask questions, and neither should you. You simply order one, add some curry ketchup and mayonnaise, and enjoy one of Belgium's most beloved snacks at your local frituur.

Did you know that, even though the frikandel is a true staple of Belgian frituur culture, it actually originated in the Netherlands? Poor frikandel, it doesn't really seem to have an identity of its own anymore. Not only does it go by different names depending on where you are, but it also turns out to have been born on the other side of the border. Perhaps there is one thing it can be certain of: no matter what you call it or where you think it comes from, there's always someone at the frituur who is more than happy to order and enjoy one.

Editor's note:
I once saw a pack of twenty of these things being sold for some astronomically low price in a supermarket. I mean it was low enough to make you suspicious of it. I think the box they were sold in might've cost more than the contents...

Good Eats

Foodplace of the week: Dal Pesce Innamorato

Located in the centre of Leuven, more specifically Savoyestraat 11 (side street off the Tiensestraat), lies a real hidden gem. From the outside it looks like your standard Italian restaurant that you could only afford to go to on a special occasion... Fear not, they also have a student menu! For just under 8 euros you can get a pizza with a drink. It's honestly really tasty pizza too. Proper Italian, run by actual Italians; no chain nonsense. Shoutout to D.N. for introducing the praesidium to this spot!

Want to try a pizza here too? Follow T-Mag on instagram, tag someone in our latest post, and win a free meal for one on us! The winner will be announced next Monday.
